Mike opens the meeting with discussion of Wednesday Night Live tomorrow night, which will be "Heal These Wounds". They have a myspace. The show starts at 8:00p. There are not too many volunteers, so if you would like to help out please stop by. Saturday we have Hockey, which is the last game of the season. It is vs. St. Lawrence, and it is Senior Night.

Our past Wednesday Night Live's are on the website. Poetry Slam came out pretty well, but there were some problems with the audio. Experimental Error was this weekend also, aside from the fact that Kyle stole a microphone stand from Mother's. Brian also stole a tablecloth at some point, and Mike adds that he does not ask questions when he sees new items in the office.

Dan on programming: The Film Festival is ready for submissions, and the website is up and running. More information can be found at the RPI TV website. The registration deadline is the 10th. During the hockey game this weekend, during one intermission we are going to play a high-speed video of our setup process. Reilly adds that he has digitized "Shiny Happy RPI", which is a musical singing video promoting life at RPI. He shows us some of the video. Tiffany notes that she has seen more girls in the video than she has seen all semester.

Charlie informs us that the security system is coming along. The electronics club is working on getting the circuit board etched and a few other things need to be done to complete the project.

Next Tuesday, we will be voting on the new equipment policy. We have formalized many of our procedures, and have added multiple levels of seniority for members. We can now take equipment off campus in certain situations like shooting a lecture off campus. We will send it out for members to review, as we need approval from 2/3 of the voting members. Somehow the conversation turns to how many meetings individuals have attended.

At 9:30p we will air Black Cat Elliot, then at 10:18p we will air Richard Stallman lecture. After that we will air the Senate Meeting (12:55a). At 2:55a, we will be airing Sugar Ray Drive's Wednesday Night Live as well. Another meaningless conversation takes place, so I continue eating my sandwich.

Brian is now showing people how to pack up a camera (and accessories) in the camera bag. It is very entertaining. He gave some very important information regarding the storage of equipment that all members should follow.

Sean suggests that next semester we can air hockey games every day leading up to the first game. Another suggestion was to air highlight reels instead.

We will be filming Asian Awareness Night after spring break, as well as some other events. Keep your eyes open for other events/productions/shows that would be interesting for RPI TV to film.
