Meeting Began at 21:36.

Alright. Charlie Emala asked for complaints about the pizza, and directed them to Joe Goullaud and Eric Klauser. This week's meeting refreshment was pizza from Hoosick Pizza, which was the result of much pre-meeting discussion.

Charlie Emala discussed BSA's opening ceremony. It was recorded on the wrong input, Charlie Emala says, and he blames himself. The BSA was notified about the failure. To prevent this from happening again, future filmings will always have a preview monitor.

Eric Pratt reported on this past Saturday's Work Party, during which he and Mike DiTore organized the tape library and Dan Falkenstrom and Andy Clark cataloged and labeled equipment.

Charlie Emala brought up Friday's Men's Hockey game versus Colgate. Charlie Emala read a list of volunteers. It was determined that Sean Andrese will have Rob Humphrey's scoreboard programming. Eric Klauser will miss the game as he is building a racecar, which Charlie Emala wants to use for club purposes. Andy Clark wants someone to drive the Union Van, and made a poor excuse for not doing it himself. He was called out on the excuse. Joe Goullaud will work it out with him.

Charlie Emala mentioned that there would be a pre-production meeting for the webcast of this Saturday's Whiteout Game versus Cornell following the business meeting. Andy Clark, who is running the production, took a list of volunteers.

Charlie Emala asked for a crew for the BSA's 3rd Annual Gospel Expo on February 16 (a Friday). This production is important because it will provide some new and different content for the club. UPAC Sound will be there, simplifying the production. Charlie Emala will not be there, but several people volunteered.

Dan Falkenstrom presented a report on What's Up RPI, which is coming along as more editing being completed. There will be a shoot in the studio on February 19, and some people with studio experience will be needed. A couple of people volunteered.

Joe Goullaud said that the Battle of the Bands is finally well underway, and a 20 minute preview will be presented to the club after the meeting. He recently overcame several hardware issues to enable multi-cam editing. The final DVD should be ready in a couple of weeks.

Sean Andrese is making progress on editing the Pool Show, having digitized most of the film. He is, however, having some audio troubles. Eric Klauser had some suggestions.

Joe Goullaud will be scouting out camera locations to shoot WRPI's "Wednesday Night Live", a live in-studio band for the radio station which he would like to put live on RPI TV next Wednesday. Six people, including himself, volunteered. Several members were enthusiastic about the idea.

Mike Filippone entered.

Charlie Emala said this meeting sucked, which, judging from his past observations, seems to be becoming the norm.

The meeting was adjourned at 22:02.
