Charlie Emala asked Andy Clark to stop talking about the snow, which Eric Klauser made a large topic of discussion at the Executive Meeting.

Charlie Emala almost died last Friday. He says there will never again be a hockey game shot with less than seven crew members present. He says there was a problem with the connection to the WRPI feed, which was not fixed until during the game. The stress caused Charlie Emala to perform poorly as director during the first period. Any other comments?

Charlie Emala likes these long pauses.

Sean Andrese commented that the scoreboard needs an update for the rare case that penalty shot is called during the game.

There will be a Whiteout Post-Production meeting following the business meeting, provided by Andy Clark.

Upcoming events include the 3rd Annual Gospel Expo on Friday. Only two volunteers were able to attend, though the club was hoping to have six to seven people on hand. Recruitment methods, including subtle threats, questioning, references to alcohol, and long, awkward pauses yielded two additional volunteers. Charlie Emala says there will be a max of two cameras.

Joe Goullaud would still like to shoot WRPI's live band, but will have to push it back since last week's band was canceled, and there was no opportunity to scout out shooting positions. Andy Clark thinks that scouting out shooting positions is a good idea. There also needs to be work done to get the feed from WRPI to Media Operations

Charlie Emala asked, What's Up RPI? Andy Clark laughed. Dan Falkenstrom explained that he plans to shoot in the studio on Monday (President's Day). Several volunteers were listed.

Joe Goullaud is still editing the Battle of the Bands. Eric Klauser pressured him for a date, though he isn't getting anything done himself.

While Andy Clark did not get an update on Doraj, to much displeasure of the club, Joe Goullaud did. Dan Ostrov told him over the weekend that he would not be working on Doraj until possibly next semester. Andy Clark said that the club should support Dan Ostrov to get it done some weekend this semester, but it is unclear what the future of the production is.

Charlie Emala closed the meeting with another depressing comment on how much the meeting sucked. This time, however, the problems were entirely Dan Ostrov's fault, so it isn't so bad.

The meeting was adjourned at 21:50.
