Meeting Began at 21:34.

Charlie Emala has begun the meeting but is still discussing what items broke which windows in his dorm.

Eric Klauser would like to know if this information will go in the minutes.

It took the words of Brian Zaik to get the meeting started. Charlie Emala then asked about past events.

Joe Goullaud reported on Wednesday Night Live. The band that performed last week will be here for Spring Fling. The production went well and should start airing tomorrow if not Thursday.

Charlie Emala said that Rock Against Genocide was this past Saturday. He asked that members form a queue to give complaints about the production. Andy Clark was at the head of the queue.

Andy Clark: This was the least professional, least organized event in the time I've been in the club. If it hadn't been for the efforts of Joe G, James C, and ACL, it would have been a couple people on stage without microphones so nobody would have been able to hear them.

Andy Clark thanked WRPI for volunteering some equipment at the last minute. He then repeated 5 times that this was the Worst. Event. Ever.

[Andy Clark requested bold and italics on his statement, but was not granted any special formatting.]

Charlie Emala thanked Joe Goullaud for missing a baseball game for the club. Several members began discussing the particular baseball game and baseball in general. The club secretary paid no attention.

Eric Klauser says baseball sucks. Charlie Emala says baseball sucks, but only in comparison to hockey. 165 days until puck drop at RPI, he says.

Brian Michalski wants to put up a slide with that countdown.

Charlie Emala says that tomorrow is the last WRPI live band. He asked who could help out. Andy Clark commented that it was a good crew. With subtle sarcasm, he said this crew would be a great crew to go live with. Joe Goullaud, who will not be going live with this production, had no response.

Andy Clark says that Eric Pratt wants to be on the crew for the upcoming dance production. Charlie Emala appointed Eric Pratt event supervisor. Andy Clark says Eric Pratt says fine. Joe Goullaud says that Eric Pratt will be the sole crew member.

Charlie Emala noted that Dennis Rochon is applying to the E-Board. Andy Clark punched through the door onto the balcony (after an unsuccessful attempt to open it) to inform the current E-Board representative, Nicholas Wood, currently in an outdoor Student Government meeting, of this fact. Andy Clark spent about five minutes of the meeting introducing each to the other. Charlie Emala was actually supportive of these antics because he thinks all the other applicants “want to [mess] with my money!”

Charlie Emala stopped the meeting to read the minutes.

Andy Clark tried to make excuses for his inability to use a lock.

Charlie Emala asked for a Programming Committee update, which he says will be followed by an update from the Pirate Bay torrent tracker. Joe Goullaud had nothing to report, so instead congratulated Andy Clark on coming back for next year. Charlie Emala wanted to make super-senior jokes, but most members decided that the situation was funny enough, a joke was not necessary.

Charlie Emala’s shoes have worn as thin as Eric Klauser’s. He felt that this information was noteworthy.

[Discussion of pirating software omitted. The omitted conversation did not constitute any activities encouraged by or affiliated with RPI TV.]

Charlie Emala said he has nothing else, it’s an open floor.

Dennis Rochon will receive equipment training at the BSA event.

An eruption of laughter from the far end of the room confused many members. Andy Clark, August Fietkau, and Nicholas Wood laughed and made cryptic comments while the club looked on.

Joe Goullaud brought up the show that is currently in pre-production. He asked how the crew was doing, and received a positive response. Joe Goullaud, Vice President of Programming, and Nick Milano, producer of the new program, agreed that the script would be done by next Thursday.

Charlie Emala invented a new expletive in order to describe the photographer who occupied the room where the RPI TV Executive Committee was scheduled to meet earlier in the evening.

Joe Goullaud said there would be a Programming Committee meeting this Thursday.

Charlie Emala has nothing else.

The meeting was adjourned at 21:50 and followed by a high-speed chase involving Joe Goullaud and Nicholas Wood, who expertly escaped his pursuer, but only to be referred to as "a scrappy bastard."
