Michael Rahaim asked about the hockey game on February 4 vs. Union. Andrew Clark said we are going to do the Union game this weekend, since we're not doing the Poetry Slam. Michael Rahaim asked if we plan on filming the Freakout game, and Andrew Clark said yes, and we'll film it the old way with two cameras and the setup down by the pep band. Michael Rahaim asked for crew for the hockey game this weekend, and Eric Klauser volunteered. Michael Rahaim said he could do it. Michael Rahaim asked for volunteers for the Freakout. Rob Humphreys and Eric Klauser volunteered. Rob Humphreys might be able to do the Union game this weekend.

Michael Rahaim asked about the Poetry Slam. Andrew Clark said it was postponed indefinitely.

We moved on to The World This Week, but Sundhari Ganesan isn't here. Michael Filippone said he filmed a documentary for it. Andrew Clark asked if we don't have a crew for The World This Week, and Pamela Portelli said she could help out but doesn't know how to do the setup.

Michael Rahaim asked Michael Filippone about his show, and he said he would help out with other things while he thinks of ideas. Michael Rahaim asked Eric Pratt about Doraj, Dan's show. Eric Pratt said filming is going well, we're filming 3 episodes this semester for Part 1 of the miniseries. He said we also have to wait until the snow melts to film the outside scenes, but otherwise we're moving right along.

Michael Rahaim moved to open floor. Michael Filippone asked about Frank Santana, the public safety officer, who wanted to do the pool show. Andrew Clark said he doesn't know, though he's usually in the Games Room, and Michael Filippone said he could just go to Public Safety and ask for him.

Michael Rahaim said we'll figure out The World This Week and the hockey games later by e-mail, because of sparse attendance. Eric Klauser said we don't have enough crew for the hockey, but he could do it by himself. Andrew Clark said we'll have to run a 300 foot XLR up to the press box to get the WRPI audio feed.

Andrew Clark said we'll coordinate by e-mail.

Meeting adjourned at 8:46 PM.
